

Romania's Elderly

Romania, in far Eastern Europe, has a landscape similar to that of Tennessee. But its history is much different. After World War II, Romania fell under the influence of the former Soviet Union and became a country behind the Iron Curtain. Romania was ruled by two dictators for over 40 years, The last was the notorious Nicolae Ceausescu. After his fall in 1989, the world's eyes were opened to the horrible plight of the people under his ruthless regime.

Today, many years after the fall of Communism, Romania's infrastructure is still lacking the basic needs in many villages. The elderly often live without electricity, clean water, and proper sanitation. In desperate cases, they end up living on the streets.

Elder Orphan Care provides much-needed practical support and spiritual encouragement to those alone in their twilight years.
